

Port Region | How port volume becomes New Jersey industrial demand

The Port Region is the largest industrial submarket in Northern New Jersey — the clearest regional evidence of how the port's throughput converts directly into real estate demand.

THE PIVOT

Vacancy is up. Demand isn't down.

Port Region vacancy rose 110 bps this quarter — that's a big-box supply story (nearly 1.0 msf of new large-format vacant space), not a demand story: leasing is still up 9.8% YoY, and Class A rent is up 7.1%.

The following pages show why shallow bay specifically is structurally insulated from that supply wave, where that shows up on the ground, and how Faropoint's own house view and 2026 acquisition record underwrite the difference.
